Picture of the Week: Cooling new Trinity supercomputer

March 2, 2015

Installation of the cooling infrastructure to support the new Trinity supercomputer at Los Alamos National Laboratory is well underway.

When Trinity becomes operational it will be the first platform able to accommodate finely resolved 3D calculations for full-scale, end-to-end weapons calculations

Click here to share this picture, with several size options, from Flickr